Co-Creating Evidence Evaluation Report:

Stories and Outcomes of Wraparound Programs
Reaching Pregnant and Parenting Women at Risk

What women hoped to get from participating in their program – Top themes

[I wanted] better housing, support to keep me away from drugs and alcohol, and help with nutrition. [I wanted] to keep my baby.

Women's 'Most Significant Change' since participating in their program – Top themes

If I hadn't been at this program, it would have been hard to stay sober, and my baby would have gone to live with my mom.

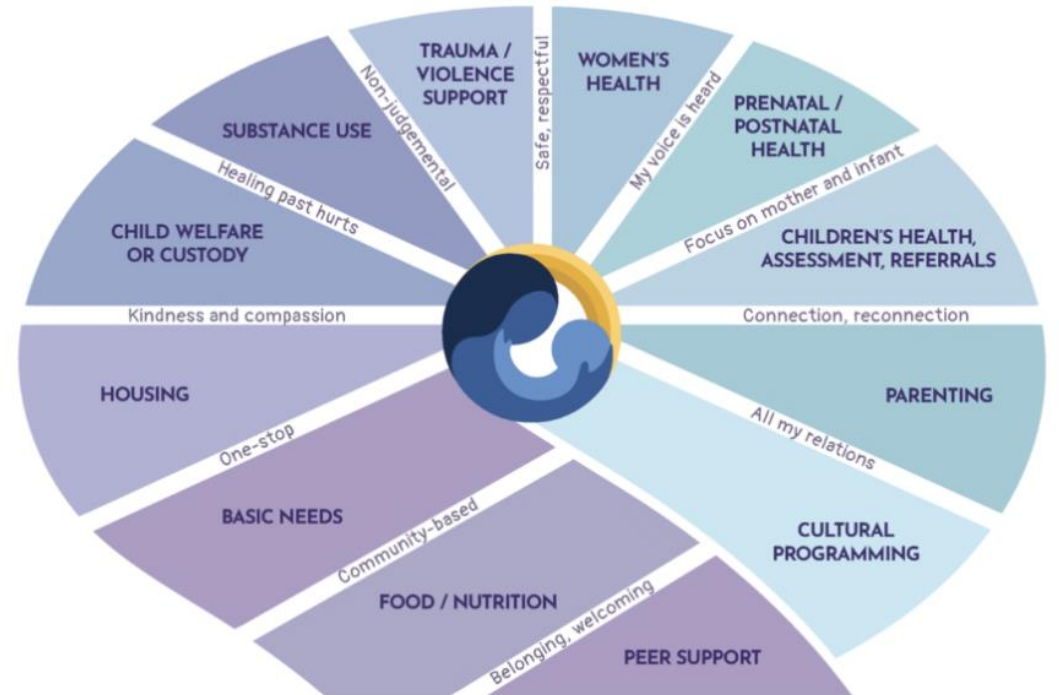

Practice implications: Continue to use and build on these key elements

- One-stop/wraparound services
- Knowledgeable and empathetic program staff
- Well conceptualized, evidence-based theoretical foundation
- Strong partnership relationships
- Indigenous cultural (re)connection
- Opportunities for community/peer support

Co-Creating Evidence:

The Co-Creating Evidence Project (CCE) was a multi-site evaluation of community-based programs that support women in the prevention of FASD through harm reduction oriented, trauma-informed, culturally safe and women-centred approaches. It involved eight programs located in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario, and Nova Scotia.

The aims of the CCE project were to: share practice knowledge; demonstrate the effectiveness of prevention programs for women with substance use and complex issues; and identify characteristics that make these
